PSWAR, Passages Through, Amsterdam 2009

As important as the artwork itself is the way of its presentation, is the argument of PSWAR, Tamuna Chabashvili, Adi Hollander und Vesna Madzoski from Amsterdam. Hence, in their interdisciplinary work, they emphasize on the meaning and function of the art space itself. They focus on the mutual influence between the artwork and its space and the conditions of art perception in their artistic debate.

To devote space to the social and cultural parameters of architecture, arts and design, PSWAR create within their installation PASSAGES THROUGH (THE UNFINISHED MONUMENT) a symbiotic unit through the correlation of theory and practice as well as of historically significant and current art concepts.

We are very pleased to present the innovative work of Public Space With A Roof (PSWAR) for the first time in Austria. Not only does this work allow new interpretations of Kiesler's oeuvre, it is equally characteristic of contemporary working methods of the art of our time.
